THE HARVARD REPRESENTATIVES.

LONDON, August 31.

A grand row was given at the Crystal Palace this evening by the Harvard and London rowers, by the London Rowing Club. Mr. Chas. Dickens presided. Among the guests were the members of the Harvard crew present, all the officers of the London Rowing Club, the Lord Mayor, Sheriffs, Aldermen, and the Colonial Governors present or invited. Among those present were Charles Francis, Thomas Hughes, Richard Yates, Charles J. Mc-Curdy, Governor Bullock, Governor Andrew, Governor Morley and Mayor Shurtleff, all of whom were greeted with cheers. After the dinner was given the usual toasts, the Queen, the Prince of Wales, the Royal Family, etc., as well as those of the Harvard crew, which were received with great applause. Mr. Dickens, in proposing the health of the Harvard crew, said he was glad to see the representatives of the United States present. He hoped that the two countries would be united by the strongest bonds of peace and friendship. He was glad to see the Harvard crew. He knew their feelings, the feelings of college, and the feelings of England, and he knew that they would be received with the greatest cordiality and hospitality. He was glad to see the Harvard crew, although they had been beaten. He hoped the next crew, or some crew, if they came over again, would find in that defeat a lesson which would lead them to victory. Looking to the crew by which they were defeated, he had no reason to be ashamed of it.

Mr. Wilson, on the part of the Oxfords, regretted the unavoidable absence of the representatives of that crew. With respect to the defeat, as an old hand, he said it had not been won easily. It was the result of downright hard work.

Thomas Hughes then toasted the London Club. He referred to his own experience and the glorious days of Englefield Green. He alluded to the Harvard University, to pulling Harvard Hall, and Lowell Agassiz, and wanted to hear from them. Peters pantaloons would regret the absence of Hartwell, whose reputation gives to the pantaloons and others in past generations.

Mr. Hayford proposed the toast "Our Visitors." Mr. Hayford had rowed in the Oxford boat and a stroke. No crew could attain perfection without practice. He urged them to see to their training.

Mr. Bullock, Governor of Massachusetts, responded.

After a toast to the London Club, Mr. Rice proposed the health of the Lord Mayor, to which an appropriate response was made by his lordship. They were given many good wishes, and Sheriffs Lawrence and Cotton responded.

LONDON, August 31.

The following is the list of the Harvard crew that rowed here on Friday:

THE HARVARD BOAT LEAVES HERE TO-DAY.

LONDON, August 31.

Stroke, Loring; Fay and Stubbs, of the Harvard crew, leave here to-day for Liverpool, en route for New York on the steamer City of Boston.

LONDON, August 31.

The Saturday Review says: "The Harvard crew have been highly favorable to the crops in the north of England, and a large harvest is now certain. Even in the south of England, and all over the continent, the weather has been of a kind to ripen the crops, and the harvest will not take it so very much."

PROSPECTS OF THE LATE SOOTHERS.

LONDON, August 31.

The Standard says editorially on the subject of the late Southern riots: "The feeling of the Barbarian was that the Southerners had been beaten. It was too fast to last. The riots of a great many years ago, which were the result of a great excitement, were the result of the strain. They reached the point which brought them to an end. The riots of the present year will not be allowed to last for more than a few days. The Southerners will not take it to heart that they have been beaten in a fair fight. They will not be disposed to make war upon the victors. The riots of the present year will not take it to any time."

PROSPECTS OF THE CROPS.

LONDON, August 31.

The Standard says editorially on the subject of the crops: "Happening but little of importance in the political world, the attention of the public is directed to the crops. Reports from all parts of the United Kingdom are favorable. Farmers in nearly all parts of the United Kingdom have commenced harvesting. The weather has been favorable to the crops in the south of England, and all the general encouragement is given. It will be some days before the harvest will be in full progress in the north of England, and the effects of the weather upon the crops there cannot be fully known."

THE LONDON TIMES ON THE HARVARD CREW.

LONDON, August 31.

The Times, this morning, says: "The Harvard crew have been highly favorable to the crops in the north of England, and a large harvest is now certain. Even in the south of England, and all over the continent, the weather has been of a kind to ripen the crops, and the harvest will not take it so very much."

Everything Tabled.

A [illegible] meeting of the delegates to the Temperance Convention was held last evening at the rooms of the Chicago Young Men's Christian Association, Mr. H. L. Van Cleve in the chair, and Messrs. A. C. Hall, of Cook, Jesse Grimes, of Kankakee, and A. C. Hanson, of Will, Secretaries.

Judge Dickey, of Kankakee, moved that it would be unwise to attempt to form a State ticket, but that it was best to put in nomination candidates for Congress, Senator, Representatives, and County Officers, and that the Committee on Resolutions be instructed to report a platform in accordance with the principles of the Chicago Platform, and that the Committee on Nominations be instructed to report candidates for the above offices.

Mr. Hall, of Cook, moved
